Chair's Message

This is the third Annual Report of the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal. Our Annual Reports coincide with the government's fiscal year; therefore, this Report will cover the period from April 1, 2000 to March 31, 2001.

Our third year of operations has been a successful one. The recommendations received from our operational review in 1999 have been implemented and we are currently seeing the benefits of some of these improvements in the Tribunal's day to day work.

With respect to mediation, we have found it more beneficial to concentrate on "duty" mediation rather than "routine" mediation. Duty mediation occurs on the day of the hearing while routine mediation is conducted in advance of the hearing date. We have found clients to be more responsive to "duty" mediation. Our mediations have been successful in large urban areas and mediators are now being sent to more remote areas to help our clients in these areas.

Work on our call centre is almost complete and we are excited about the improvements that this can make in service quality to our clients. Our website continues to grow as our clients are using it more and more often as an alternative to telephone enquiries and personal visits.

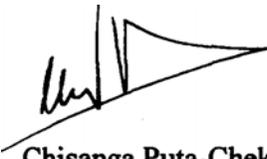

Above guideline increase applications have been a challenge. Although these applications make up less than 1% of our workload, they take up a disproportionate amount of time. We have spent a great deal of time improving our service in this area.

I am confident that next year, we will begin to see progress in resolving these applications in a timely manner.

For 98% of our work, we continue to operate with exceptional efficiency, with practically no backlog.

We have also improved the layout of our Notice of Hearing so that it provides more information in an easily understandable format for our clients. Our forms are under review in an attempt to ease the difficulties of data processing and lengthy waiting times as applications are received at the counter.

Sincerely,

THE TENANT PROTECTION ACT

On June 17, 1998, the Tenant Protection Act, 1997, commonly known as the TPA, was proclaimed.

The TPA brought together six pieces of legislation that formerly governed the relationship between landlords and tenants. The result is a comprehensive package that balances the rights and obligations of tenants and landlords.

The four primary objectives of the TPA are:

- ▶ To simplify the relationship between landlords and tenants
- ▶ To balance the needs of landlords and tenants
- ▶ To create an efficient process that deals with disputes quickly
- ▶ To create a cost efficient process

Under previous legislation, disputes between landlords and tenants were settled through the provincial court system. The court system was formal and costly, and dispute resolution often took a long time.

As well, the previous legislation had a separate system, Rent Control Programs, that oversaw the regulation of rent increases and provided information resources for tenants and landlords.

The need to provide a one-window service to tenants and landlords was clear. As a result, the Tenant Protection Act, 1997 consolidated the two systems and created an independent, quasi-judicial agency - the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal - to resolve landlord and tenant disputes.

THE ROLE OF THE ONTARIO RENTAL HOUSING TRIBUNAL

The role of the Tribunal is to:

- ▶ Resolve tenant and landlord disputes through either adjudication or mediation
- ▶ Determine legal above guideline rent increases in residential rental accommodations
- ▶ Provide landlords and tenants with information about their rights and obligations

The Tribunal focuses solely on residential rental accommodation issues and offers a process that is more efficient than previous systems for resolving landlord and tenant issues.

The Adjudication Process

The Tribunal was designed to create a more informal environment for the resolution of disputes between tenants and landlords. Under the adjudication process:

- ▶ Disputes are heard in public buildings rather than courthouses
- ▶ Tenants may choose to represent themselves and may consult an on-site legal aid representative
- ▶ The more conciliatory approach of mediation is encouraged before the hearing process begins or during the hearing if the adjudicator feels that the matter lends itself to mediation
- ▶ The Tribunal's adjudicators are highly qualified professionals who have both the experience and the knowledge to deal quickly and fairly with the issues. Adjudicators are appointed to the Tribunal after undergoing a rigorous and competitive interview and selection process.

The adjudicators meet formally twice a year to discuss issues and informally in their regions, on a more frequent basis. Many of them sit on committees and working groups such as the Rules and Guidelines Committee, groups to look at the order format, and other groups that gather opinions on specific issues. Many of the members' meetings also contain elements of training such as conduct of a hearing, natural justice, amendments to the TPA and to other legislation such as the Statutory Powers Procedure Act.

The Mediation Process

Mediation is offered under the Tribunal's legislation. It is often used to clarify issues and settle disputes so that the hearing may proceed more expeditiously. Mediated settlements are more flexible in their content than Tribunal orders. This often assists parties in reaching a satisfactory conclusion to their difficulties. Mediators use both their knowledge of rent regulation and their negotiation skills to assist landlords and tenants in resolving their applications and their concerns before the hearing.

Approximately 12% of the Tribunal's applications are successfully mediated. More difficult to quantify is the benefit of resolving only some of the issues in an application. Although these applications will have to be heard, the hearing takes a much shorter time because many of the issues have already been resolved through mediation. We are trying to focus more of our mediation efforts on the more complex applications. We have had some success with mediating Above Guideline Increase applications, which saves all parties lengthy hearings and provides a quicker resolution of the issues.

Locations

The Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal has eight regional offices and eleven client service across the province. Most of the Tribunal's hearings are held in its regional offices.

Hearings are held in the areas that are most convenient for tenants and landlords.

The regional offices are located in the following areas:

- ▶ London
- ▶ Hamilton
- ▶ Mississauga
- ▶ Toronto South (Downtown)
- ▶ Toronto North (North York)
- ▶ Toronto East (Scarborough)
- ▶ Ottawa
- ▶ Sudbury

At client service offices, landlords and tenants can file applications, have their questions answered by a customer service representative, and attend hearings (when it is convenient for both parties to do so). The client services offices are located in the following areas:

- |                 |                  |
|-----------------|------------------|
| → Windsor       | → North Bay      |
| → Thunder Bay   | → St. Catharines |
| → Kingston      | → Peterborough   |
| → Timmins       | → Barrie         |
| → Durham/Whitby | → Kitchener      |
| → Owen Sound    |                  |

The Tribunal has a network of filing centres across the province where tenants or landlords can file their applications and pick up information about the Tribunal. These filing centres are currently run by private issuers who handle other government documents in more remote areas of the province. We will be exploring ways in which to work as partners with the Government Information Centres across Ontario which have a presence in some of the more remote areas of the province during the next fiscal year.

Call Centre

The Tribunal has created a call centre for handling customer inquiries. This is a toll-free number (1-888-332-3234) which operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Customer Service representatives are available during normal business hours. An extensive telephone script answers frequently asked questions. This year, the Tribunal responded to approximately 850,000 telephone calls. After hours and on weekends, a toll-free number is also available for faxing time sensitive documents and for ordering any of the Tribunal's public education brochures. These brochures are available in English and French. Selected brochures on the most important topics are available in seven other languages: Portuguese, Italian, Chinese, Punjabi, Polish, Tamil and Spanish.

The Tribunal's web-site (orht.gov.on.ca) is visited almost 50,000 times each year. All forms are available on the Internet as well as through each regional and client service office.

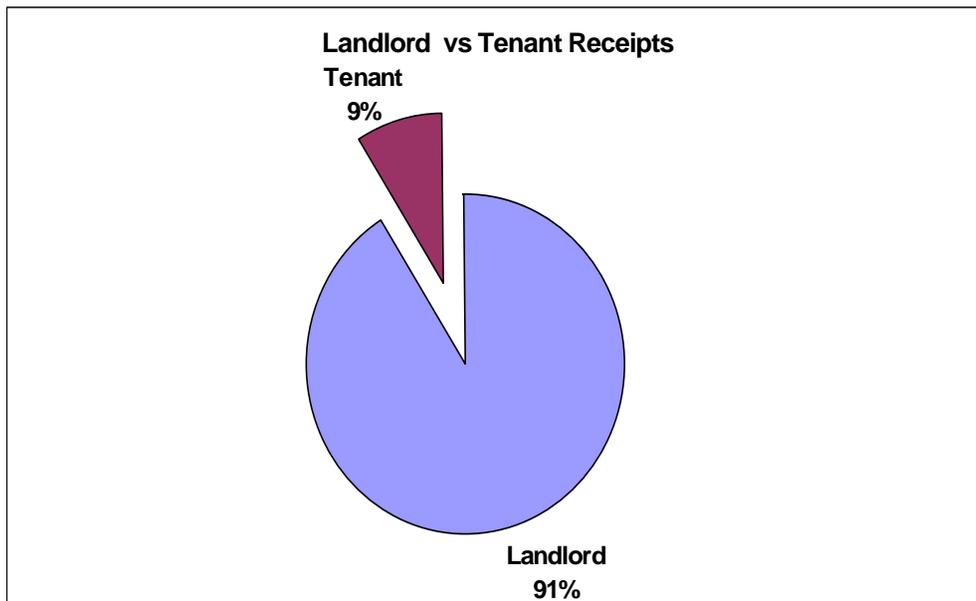

The Tribunal's telephone system will be updated in 2001 to improve our service to customers. The new equipment will allow our customer service representatives to respond to more calls and will allow more clients to get through on our 1-888 telephone line.

Statistical Information for the year 2000-2001

Applications

During the year, the Tribunal received 73,931 applications and resolved 76,946. (Because the Tribunal resolves re-opened mediation and set-asides, some applications may be counted twice.) At the end of the fiscal year 3,536 applications were still in process.

The distribution of the receipts for the 2000-2001 fiscal year are reflected in the following profile:

The regional distribution of applications is as follows:

CE refers to Central; EA to Eastern; NO to Northern; SO to Southern; SW to Southwestern; TE to Toronto East; TN to Toronto North; and TS to Toronto South

Eviction applications have been in the majority since the Tribunal began in 1998. This year, the trend has continued. Of the total applications received by the Tribunal, 71.40 per cent were for termination of tenancies because of arrears of rent. This is down slightly from 72.63 per cent last year. Tenant applications accounted for 7.10 per cent of the applications filed during this fiscal year. This is slightly up from 7.05 per cent last year.

Above Guideline Increase Applications

An average of 251 applications for above guideline increases were received each year under the Rent Control Act. During the first year of Tribunal operations, 887 applications for above guideline increase were received. Although the number decreased to 388 during the 1999-2000 fiscal year, the number again rose to 608 during this fiscal year.

We are finding that these applications, combined with applications for tax increases and decreases, take a disproportionate amount of time both for staff and adjudicators. A study of the Tribunal's workload found that these applications which make up only one per cent of the Tribunal's workload, take 16 per cent of the Tribunal's time.

Although the Tribunal has found some ways to handle this difficult and time consuming workload, it remains a priority for us in the coming year. We have determined that mediation between represented parties to an above guideline increase application has been successful in easing this problem and we will continue to encourage resolutions through mediated settlements.

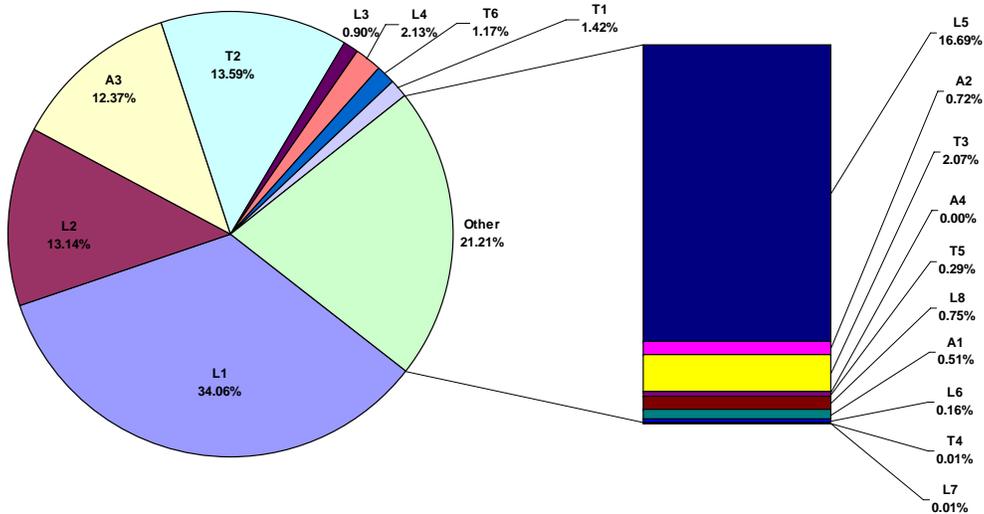

The charts on the following two page show the distribution of the Tribunal's workload, by type of application and disposition method (default or hearing), as well as a distribution of application type by hearing time.

Harassment Applications

Tenants may apply to the Tribunal for relief, at no charge, if they believe that their landlord has been harassing them. The Tribunal received 2,788 applications relating to tenant rights as compared to 2,641 during the last fiscal year. Of the number received, 440 had yet to be resolved at the end of the fiscal year.

APPLICATION RESOLUTION

The Tribunal has been successful in resolving applications quickly. On average, the Tribunal maintains only one month's receipts as open files. Most orders are issued within 22 days of filing the application and even more complex orders were issued within 25 days.

The Tribunal continues however, to experience difficulty in processing above guideline increase applications as quickly and as efficiently as we would like. Finding ways of meeting this challenge will become an on-going project for the Tribunal over the coming months.

The chart below indicates that receipts and resolutions remained constant during the year.

CE refers to Central; EA to Eastern; NO to Northern; SO to Southern; SW to Southwestern; TE to Toronto East; TN to Toronto North and TS to Toronto South.

ORDER SUMMARIES

Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal adjudicators are responsible for hearing a wide variety of applications from both landlords and tenants. These applications address such issues as above guideline rent increases, evictions and orders for payment of arrears.

The following presents a sample of cases heard by the Tribunal during the 2000-2001 fiscal year.

Landlord Application

Section 34

The landlord applied to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenant, based on the tenant's alleged interference with the reasonable enjoyment of the premises by the landlord.

Both the landlord and the tenant attended the hearing. At the hearing, the landlord stated that she had served a Notice of Early Termination on the tenant as the tenant would not allow her access to show the unit to prospective buyers, even after she had served the tenant with a 24-hour written notice as required under section 21 of the Act. The landlord stated that she entered the rental unit, accompanied by a police officer, and took pictures and measurements. The landlord also stated that she served this notice of termination on the tenant which allowed the tenant to remedy the situation within seven days, failing which the notice would then become void. The landlord served the notice on the tenant on June 1, 2000. The landlord advised the tenant in writing that she would be entering the rented premises on June 12, 2000. The member found that subsection 64(3) of the Tenant Protection Act, 1997 provides a seven-day remedy period and if the tenant, within seven days of receiving the notice, stops the conduct or remedies the situation the notice is then void. The member dismissed the application based on the fact that the landlord did not attempt to gain access to the rental unit within the required 7-day remedy period as required under subsection 64(3) of the Act.

Tenant Application

Section 35

The tenants applied for an order to determine if the landlord had harassed, obstructed, coerced, threatened or interfered with the tenants' reasonable enjoyment and/or withheld the reasonable supply of a vital service.

The hearing was held on February 16, 2001. All parties were present along with their legal representatives. At the start of the hearing, the landlord's legal representative raised a preliminary matter to determine if the Tribunal had jurisdiction to hear this application and moved for the application to be dismissed. The landlord's lawyer was relying on section 3(i) of the TPA, which states that the Act does not apply where the occupant is required to share a kitchen or bathroom facility with the owner who lives in the premises. There was no dispute that the owner lived in the residential unit. There also was no doubt that the parties originally intended to share the kitchen facilities between the owner and the occupants. Even though the tenants were using a separate area with a sink and had supplied their own microwave, the original intention was for these parties to share the kitchen facilities. The member found the Tribunal had no jurisdiction and dismissed the application as per section 3(i) of the TPA.

Landlord and Tenant Application (Heard in Common)

Sections 69 and 35

The landlord applied for an order to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenants as they had not paid the rent they owed. The tenants applied for an order determining that the landlord had substantially interfered with their reasonable enjoyment.

The landlord's application was originally scheduled to be heard on September 12, 2000. However, at the hearing the parties agreed to adjourn the hearing to allow the tenants to pay two months rent into the Tribunal and to file their own application about tenant rights. An Interim Consent order was issued by the Tribunal confirming the terms agreed to by the parties.

The two applications were heard in common. All parties were present. The landlord presented two witnesses. The tenants had one witness who was not called upon to give evidence. On the issue of the landlord's application for non-payment of rent, all parties agreed that there were no arrears owing at this time as the tenants had paid the full amount into the Tribunal as directed by the Interim Order.

The tenants' application was based on an unpainted door to their townhouse rental unit. In September 1999, the tenants' unit was broken into. The front door and frame were damaged as a result of this break-in, and further damage was caused by the police when they dusted for fingerprints.

On the evening of the break-in the landlord's staff carried out temporary repairs to ensure the unit was secure. The next day, the landlord's staff returned and replaced the door with a new one. The door was only painted with a primer coat, and there was no dispute between the parties that the door required painting. The tenants continued to contact the landlord and the landlord's staff requesting that the door be painted. In August 2000, the door was painted. The tenant explained that this unpainted door interfered with her reasonable enjoyment. Her testimony was that as long as door remained unpainted she was unable to put the trauma of the break-in behind her. As well, an unpainted door was a clear invitation to anyone else who may be interested in breaking into her home. After several calls to the landlord she stated that out of frustration she decided to withhold the rent for July and August 2000, until the door was painted. The landlord submitted a letter from the tenant stating that she had to leave her previous job due to medical reasons and was at this time unemployed. The landlord drew the attention of the member to this letter stating that nowhere in the letter did the tenant state that she was withholding rent because of the unpainted door.

The member preferred the evidence of the landlord, as it was clear and concise compared to that of the tenant which was contradictory and vague. The member also placed significant weight on the August 2, 2000 letter from the tenant as she did not use this opportunity to inform the landlord of the outstanding painting of the door and how it was impacting on her reasonable enjoyment of the premises, but chose only to address her financial situation.

The member dismissed the tenants' application due to a lack of evidence. The landlord's application was dismissed since the tenants had paid all arrears owing into the Tribunal. This was directed to be paid to the landlord. The tenants were then ordered to pay costs to the landlord in the amount of $285.00. This represented $225.00 for the tenants' unreasonable conduct and $60.00 for the cost of the landlord's application.

Tenant Application

Section 144

The tenant applied for an order to determine if the landlord had collected or retained money illegally.

At the hearing, both parties were present and self-represented. The tenant claimed that there was damage caused to her personal belongings due to a flood in her apartment. She also requested a rent abatement for the damage this caused to the floor.

The tenant stated that in the early morning hours of January 22, 2000, a hot water pipe burst. This pipe supplied water to the units above her apartment. The burst pipe caused damage to several units, including the applicant's. The tenant had to move out since the unit was uninhabitable. She was able to re-occupy the unit in the middle of February 2000.

The tenant stated that the landlord should have taken precautions to avoid this situation as a similar situation had happened in 1997. The landlord argued that the two situations were not similar.

The member preferred the evidence of the landlord regarding the cause of the burst pipe. He did not believe that the water damage was the fault of the landlord caused by a lack of preventative maintenance, regular inspections, or any of the other reasons argued by the tenant. An abatement of rent was awarded to the tenant in the amount of $320.00 for the half month that the tenant had to vacate the unit. As well an amount was awarded to the tenant for food that spoiled when the landlord's staff accidentally unplugged the refrigerator, plus an additional $100.00 for sundry living and travelling expenses incurred by the tenant.

Tenant Application

Sections 32 and 35

The tenants applied for an order to determine if the landlord had interfered with their reasonable enjoyment of the rental unit.

The hearing was held on August 17, 2000. All parties were present, as was the landlord's solicitor. The basis of this case was that the tenants felt that the rental unit required painting and new carpeting. The landlord argued that he had a maintenance schedule in place for these items, and to vary from that would be problematic.

The main concern of the tenants was that the rental unit did not necessarily need painting or the carpet replaced, they merely wished permission to do the decorating for their own pleasure and at their own costs. The landlord would not consent to this. The member found that this was not necessarily harassment on the part of the landlord, but by refusing to give his consent to the these upgrades it did interfere with the tenants' reasonable enjoyment of the rental unit. The member issued an order allowing a current abatement of rent in the amount of $1.00 as a token to assume jurisdiction to award a future amount of an abatement on a conditional basis. The order allowed the tenants to paint the walls of the rental unit in a white or an off-white colour and to purchase and install residential quality carpet for any room of the apartment. This order allowed a further abatement of $100.00 per month for each month the landlord refused his consent to allow these upgrades.

Landlord Application

Section 76

The landlords applied for an order to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenants as the tenants signed an agreement to terminate.

The landlord and both tenants were present at the hearing. The landlord claimed that the tenants had agreed to terminate the tenancy and vacate the rental unit. The member relied upon several sections of the Act in making his findings.

Pursuant to sub-section 76(1) of the Tenant Protection Act, 1997, a landlord may apply to the Tribunal for an order terminating the tenancy and evicting the tenant if the landlord and the tenant have entered into an agreement to terminate the tenancy or if the tenant has given notice of termination of the tenancy.

In sub-section 1(1) of the Act “tenant” is defined, in part, to include “a person who pays rent in return for the right to occupy a rental unit”, and “person” is defined, in part, to mean “an individual, sole proprietorship, partnership, limited partnership, trust or body corporate, or individual in his or her capacity as a trustee, executor, administrator or other legal representative.”

The member found the definitions of “tenant” and “person” do not include two people who are spouses of one another. Each of those spouses is an individual who has separate rights and obligations under the Act. The member found that since only one of the two tenants had signed the notice to terminate, the notice was not valid for both tenants and dismissed the landlord’s application.

Landlord Application

Subsection 138(6)

The landlord applied for an order allowing him to increase the rents for one or more of the rental units in the complex by more than the guideline amount. To support this claim the landlord submitted proof with the application that several capital expenditures had been incurred at the complex that warranted an increase that was greater than the guideline.

The application was heard on November 15, 2000. At the beginning of the hearing, the member raised a preliminary issue that the application was filed less than 90 days before the effective date of the first intended rent increase, contrary to the requirement of subsection 138(3) of the Act.

The member allowed the abridgement of time for filing this application as it was only filed two days late and any order would be contingent upon the landlord having properly served a Notice of Rent Increase. The member found no prejudice to the affected tenants in making the order sought by the landlord abridging time.

The next issue raised by the tenants was the capital expenditures claimed by the landlord. The landlord was claiming several large expenditures which the tenants did not feel met the definition of a capital expenditure as set out in the Act. The tenants submitted a prior case handled by the Tribunal in which the member did not allow capital expenditures for work done on the apartment corridors. This decision was upheld upon review and the tenants in this application were relying on the same interpretation. The member stated his view of section 138 as follows:

The landlord must, in any application, prove that a claimed expenditure is a capital expenditure as defined in subsection 15(1) of O.Reg. 194/98. If the Tribunal is satisfied that the expenditure is a capital expenditure and the landlord has also proven that this is captured by the limitations of subsection 138(8), the expenditure must be allowed.

The member allowed the expenditures claimed by the landlord and issued an order justifying an increase of 1.21% above the guideline.

Tenant Application

Section 35

The tenant applied for an order to determine if the landlord had interfered with her reasonable enjoyment of the rental unit.

The hearing was held on June 20, 2000 and on August 3, 2000. All parties were present along with the landlord's agent and counsel for the tenant. This application raises the difficult issue concerning the right of a tenant to invite guests to visit the residential premises and a right of a landlord to restrict entry by such persons.

The tenant was married to her guest and they had two children. The tenant and her guest divorced and the two children reside with their mother at the rental unit. The tenant's guest has a history of bad behaviour while he is present in the complex. The landlord stated that the tenant's guest has been verbally abusive to the landlord and to the landlord's staff in the past and the police had to intervene on three occasions in which temporary bans on being allowed to enter the complex were issued under the Trespass to Property Act, R.S.O. 1990, c.T.21.

The tenant's ex-husband has continued to assist the tenant in the raising of the children. Prior to the ban he attended at the tenant's unit, with her permission, to visit and or pick-up the children. As a result of the ban the tenant's ex-husband has been denied access to the complex making it difficult for him to visit his children. The tenant submits that, because of this, the landlord has seriously interfered with her and her children's reasonable enjoyment of the rented premises.

The member relied on section 26 of the TPA which states:

... the landlord shall not at anytime during a tenant's occupancy of a rental unit ... substantially interfere with the reasonable enjoyment of the rental unit or the residential complex in which it is located for all usual purposes by the tenant or members of his or her household.

The member also relied on the Court decision in the case Cunningham v. Whitby Christian Non-Profit Housing Corp., (1997), 33 O.R (3d) 171. In that case, the landlord issued a Trespass Notice to the tenant's guest on the basis that the landlord had determined that the guest was occupying the rental unit illegally with the tenant.

The Court found that a tenant has the right to have guests over at any time throughout their tenancy.

The member took this into consideration and issued an order instructing the landlord to refrain from interfering with the tenant's reasonable enjoyment by refusing to grant access to the tenant's ex-husband or any guests in the future.

The landlord applied for an order to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenant as he had not paid the rent he owed.

The application was heard on March 30, 2000 and concluded on April 18, 2000. The landlord was represented by his property manager and the tenant was represented by an agent. The tenant entered into an agreement with the landlord that he would pay a market rent of $791.00 per month. The landlord is a non-profit housing corporation and receives government funding to assist in providing accommodation to people who require financial assistance. The tenant's financial situation changed and he submitted an application for housing to The Community Housing Access Network (CHAN). CHAN is a government approved system of coordinated access to social housing in the Hamilton-Wentworth area.

The tenant requested several times to CHAN that his application be given priority over all others as he required a subsidy urgently. The directive of CHAN is that residents who pay market rent and who wish to receive a rent-geared-to-income subsidy are placed on a chronological waiting list. The tenant's agent argued that the landlord owed a fiduciary duty to the tenant and to evict the tenant would be a breach of this duty. He argued that this fiduciary duty arose because the landlord is in receipt of government funding to assist in the operation of its housing complexes and because the corporate objectives of the landlord include to "provide and maintain housing for low-income individuals and families" in the City of Hamilton. He argued that evicting the tenant would create a homeless person whereas the corporate objectives of the landlord imply that it was established to assist the homeless. He referred to Hodgkinson v. Simms, (1994) 3 S.C.R. 377.

The member rejected this argument and issued an order terminating the tenancy and evicting the tenant as there is nothing in the Act to suggest that a tenant waiting for a rent subsidy is exempt from eviction.

The tenants applied for an order to determine if the landlord failed to meet its maintenance obligations under the Tenant Protection Act, 1997.

The application was heard on September 29, 2000. The tenants were present and represented themselves. The landlord was represented by counsel.

The application related to the maintenance of a septic system in a land lease community.

On August 27, 1999 the tenants experienced a problem with the drainage from the dwelling to the septic system. The tenants were able to partially remedy the situation by digging up and removing the cover of the septic tank. Upon doing so, they discovered that the septic tank was overfilled and the inflow pipe was blocked. The tenants contacted the landlord on August 28, 1999 by telephone, and the landlord's property agent responded by e-mail on August 30, 1999. In this e-mail, the landlord's property agent stated to the tenants that the septic system was their responsibility and they would have to repair it as stated in their lease.

The tenants maintained the septic system for the next year until they found out that it was the landlord's responsibility under section 110 of the Act and decided to file this application.

The tenants allege that the landlord has breached its obligations under clause 110(1)(d) of the Act to maintain the sewage disposal system in a good state of repair.

As a preliminary issue, the member questioned whether the tenants had made their application within one year after the date the landlord breached the obligation. The evidence is that the problem with the septic system arose on August 27, 1999 and the application was filed on August 29, 2000, which would appear to be outside the one year limitation. The tenants faxed their application to the Tribunal on August 25, 2000, but a page was missing so the application was not accepted. The tenants were informed of this by the Tribunal on August 28, 2000, and the tenants then faxed in the missing page on August 29, 2000. The member's interpretation of subsection 110(2) of the Act would require the tenants, under normal circumstances, to file this application no later than August 27, 2000. August 27, 2000 was a Sunday, so the member relied on section 28(h) of the Interpretation Act, R.S.O. 1990, Chapter I-11 which provides that:

“where the time limited by an Act for proceeding or for the doing of anything under its provisions expires or falls on a holiday, the time so limited extends to and the thing may be done on the day next following that is not a holiday,”

The definition of holiday in the Interpretation Act includes a Sunday. The member found that the tenants had until August 28, 2000 to file their application. Since the tenants did not file their application till the day after, the member dismissed the application.

Landlord Application

Section 21.2 Review Order

The landlord applied for an order for compensation for damages caused by the tenants either negligently or willfully, and an order terminating the tenancy and evicting the tenants for the damage they have caused.

The application was heard on June 6, 2000, and was resolved by Order on June 14, 2000. On June 21, 2000, the tenants requested a review of this order. The review was granted and an Interim Order was issued on July 11, 2000. The review hearing was commenced on August 16, 2000 and concluded on September 21, 2000.

The landlord’s application was brought on the basis that the tenant had caused damage to the building’s garage door by trying to drive his truck into the underground garage without first resetting the garage door with his key. The member at the original hearing had requested documentation be given by the landlord pursuant to clause 187(1)(d) of the Act which provides as follows:

*187. (1) The Tribunal may, before, during or after a hearing,
(d) permit or direct a party to file additional evidence with the Tribunal which the Tribunal considers necessary to make its decision.*

The additional information was received on June 9, 2000 but the member did not inform the other parties so they could have an opportunity to explain or refute it. This is required under subsection 187(2) of the Act. Because of this, the reviewing member found a serious procedural error and granted the review. The reviewing member having considered all of the oral and documentary evidence and submissions made by both parties, made the following determinations:

The tenants had caused undue damage to the garage door at a cost of $1,925.70, which will be paid to the landlord on the 21st of each month starting October 21, 2000 in the amount of $300.00 per month. The reviewing member used his discretion under section 84 of the Act and did not award a termination, but allowed the landlord the right, if the tenant failed to make any of the payments for damage, to apply to the Tribunal under section 77 without notice to the tenant for an order granting the eviction.
