Chair's Message

This is the fifth Annual Report of the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal. Our Annual Reports coincide with the government's fiscal year; therefore, this Report will cover the period from April 1, 2002 to March 31, 2003.

Partnered with the Ministry of Consumer and Business Services, the Tribunal moved forward on an alternative service delivery strategy. The Tribunal has benefited through the affiliation with a service network that understands how government is organized and how it operates. The overall working relationships have been extremely positive for both organizations and for the public as well.

The Tribunal continues to win awards for its virtual call centre. Specifically, the Tribunal is the proud recipient of the Public Quality Fair 2002 Certificate of Excellence gold level; Showcase Ontario Award of Excellence 2002; and the most prestigious 2002 Amethyst award. In addition the Tribunal received recognition by the Premier and Secretary of Cabinet for significant contributions to OPS excellence and innovation.

The Tribunal has further enhanced its high quality of service by redesigning the website to meet the requirements of the Ontarians with Disabilities Act, 2001. Clients with a disability or visual impairment will notice an immediate improvement. The Tribunal will further enhance its high quality of customer service by introducing electronic filing capabilities in the near future.

Members have been active in training sessions both in-house and externally through the Society of Ontario Adjudicators and Regulators. All members have been trained thoroughly on the amendments to the Tenant Protection Act, 1997 as the result of the Government Efficiency Act, 2001.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Beverly Moore".

Beverly Moore, Interim Chair
Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal

THE TENANT PROTECTION ACT

The Tenant Protection Act, 1997, (TPA), was proclaimed on June 17, 1998.

The four primary objectives of the TPA are:

- To simplify the relationship between landlords and tenants
- To balance the needs of landlords and tenants
- To create an efficient process that deals with disputes quickly
- To create a cost-efficient process

The Tenant Protection Act provides a one-window service to landlords and tenants and offers a timely method for the resolution of disputes between landlords and tenants.

During this fiscal year, the TPA was amended by the Government Efficiency Act, 2001, with amendments taking effect on October 7, 2002. Many of the amendments clarify existing rules in the TPA, while other amendments have added new rights for landlords or tenants and change how the law applies.

Some of the amendments include:

- A prospective tenant can apply for a rebate if they paid a rent deposit for a unit, but the landlord never let them move in, and did not return the deposit. As a result of the amendment, it is also now an offence for the landlord to fail to return the deposit.
- It is now an offence if the landlord fails to allow an evicted tenant to reclaim their property within 48 hours, as required by the TPA.
- Landlords can claim NSF fees and related administration charges on applications for arrears.
- Landlords can claim arrears and NSF fees, and related administration charges, on an application to terminate a tenancy and evict a tenant where the tenant failed to comply with certain terms of an order or a mediated settlement.

- A landlord is entitled to and can apply for compensation from an overholding tenant who has terminated their tenancy by agreement with the landlord, or an unauthorized occupant who is being evicted.
- The Tribunal will have to apply the rules set out in a new regulation when deciding a tenant's application claiming that the landlord interfered with their reasonable enjoyment while doing maintenance, repairs or capital improvements at the complex. As well, the TPA has been amended to clarify that the offence provisions for harassment and interfering with reasonable enjoyment may not apply when the tenant's complaint is related to maintenance, repairs or capital improvements.
- The amendments have also given the Tribunal more flexibility in severing applications and conducting written hearings.

THE ROLE OF THE ONTARIO RENTAL HOUSING TRIBUNAL

The role of the Tribunal is to:

- Resolve tenant and landlord disputes through either adjudication or mediation
- Determine legal above guideline rent increases with respect to residential units
- Provide landlords and tenants with information about their rights and obligations

The Tribunal focuses solely on residential rental accommodation issues and offers a process that is more efficient than previous systems for resolving landlord and tenant matters.

The Adjudication Process

The Tribunal was designed to create a more informal environment for the resolution of disputes between landlords and tenants. Under the adjudication process:

- Disputes are heard in public buildings rather than courtrooms
- Tenants may choose to represent themselves and may consult an on-site legal aid representative
- The more conciliatory approach of mediation is encouraged before the hearing process begins or on the day of the hearing if the adjudicator feels that the matter lends itself to mediation
- The Tribunal's adjudicators are highly qualified professionals who have both the experience and the knowledge to deal quickly and fairly with the issues. Adjudicators are appointed to the Tribunal after undergoing a rigorous and competitive interview and selection process.

Adjudicators from across the province meet formally twice a year to discuss issues. They also meet more frequently and informally in their regions. Many of them sit on committees and working groups such as the Rules and Guidelines Committee, groups to review the format of orders and other groups that gather opinions on specific issues. Members' meetings also contain elements of training such as conduct of a hearing, natural justice, and amendments to the TPA and to other relevant legislation such as the Statutory Powers Procedure Act.

The Mediation Process

Mediation is offered under the Tribunal's legislation. It is often used to clarify issues and reduce areas of dispute so that the hearing may proceed more expeditiously. Mediated settlements are more flexible in their content than Tribunal orders. This often assists parties in reaching a satisfactory conclusion to their difficulties. Mediators use both their knowledge of rent regulation and their negotiation skills to assist landlords and tenants in resolving their applications and their concerns.

During the fiscal year of 2002/2003, approximately 14.4 per cent of the Tribunal's applications were successfully mediated. This is up from 13 percent last year. More difficult to quantify is the benefit of resolving only some of the issues in an application. Although these applications still have to be heard, the hearing takes a much shorter time because many of the issues have already been resolved through mediation. We are trying to focus our mediation on the more complex applications. Many tenant applications benefit greatly from mediation and we concentrate much of our resources on these. We have had success in mediating Above Guideline Increase applications, which saves all parties lengthy hearings and provides a quicker resolution of the issues.

Statistical Information for the Fiscal Year 2002-2003

Applications

During the 2002-2003 fiscal year, the Tribunal received 68,118 applications and resolved 68,505. (Because the Tribunal resolves re-opened mediation and set-asides, some applications may generate more than one resolution.) At the end of the fiscal year, 6314 applications were still in progress.

The distribution of application receipts for the 2002-2003 fiscal year remains unchanged from the last fiscal period and are in the following profile:

The regional distribution of applications is as follows:

CE refers to Central; EA to Eastern; NO to Northern; SO to Southern; SW to Southwestern; TE to Toronto East; TN to Toronto North; and TS to Toronto South

Eviction applications have been in the majority since the Tribunal began in 1998. This year, the trend has continued. Of the total applications received by the Tribunal, 71.70 per cent were for termination of tenancies because of arrears of rent. This is slightly up from 69.5 per cent last year. Tenant applications accounted for 9.48 per cent of the applications filed during this fiscal year. This is up from 8.54 per cent last year.

An average of 251 applications for above guideline rent increases were received each year under the Rent Control Act. During the first year of Tribunal operations, 887 applications for above guideline rent increases were received. In the fiscal year 2000-2001, 608 applications were received. During this fiscal year, only 471 above guideline rent increase applications were received, a substantial decrease from last fiscal year 2001-2002, where the Tribunal received 1608. Last year's increase in above guideline rent increase application receipts was mainly the result of landlords experiencing an extraordinary increase in the cost of utilities, specifically a spike in gas prices.

Although the Tribunal received approximately 30 per cent fewer above guideline rent increase applications in comparison to the previous fiscal period, these applications continue to take a disproportionate amount of time both for adjudicators and staff. These applications make up less than 1 per cent of the total applications received, and account for 20.87 per cent of the Tribunal's time.

Mediation is helping us with this workload, although we continue to look for other ways to increase our efficiency and speed up the resolution process.

The charts on the following two pages show the distribution of the Tribunal's workload, by type of application and disposition method (default or hearing), as well as a distribution of application type by hearing time.

Application Resolution

The Tribunal has been successful in resolving applications quickly. On average, the Tribunal maintains only one month's receipts as open files. Most orders are issued within 20 days of filing the application and even more complex orders are issued with 25 days.

The chart below indicates that receipts and resolutions remained constant during the year.

CE refers to Central; EA to Eastern; NO to Northern; SO to Southern; SW to Southwestern; TE to Toronto East; TN to Toronto North; and TS to Toronto South

Tribunal Locations

The Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal has eight regional offices and nine client service offices across the province where landlords and tenants can file applications, have their questions answered by a customer service representative, and attend hearings.

Most of the Tribunal's hearings are held in its regional offices located in the following areas:

- London
- Hamilton
- Mississauga
- Toronto South (Downtown area)
- Toronto North (North York area)
- Toronto East (Scarborough area)
- Ottawa
- Sudbury

In addition, hearings are also held in the client service office in Windsor.

Alternative Service Delivery

In October 2002, the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal took initial steps towards implementing a recommendation originating from the operational review of the Tribunal conducted in 2000. The Tribunal, in partnership with the Ministry of Consumer and Business Services, moved forward on an alternative service delivery strategy. In the past, the Tribunal had a network of document filing centres across the province where tenants or landlords could file their applications and pick up information about the Tribunal. These filing centres run by private issuers handled other government documents in more remote areas of the province. The alternative service delivery strategy involved the transfer of application intake service from these low volume document filing centres to Government Information Centres; co-locating busy Tribunal Client Service Offices with Government Information Centres in the form of a service collaboration; and closure of low volume Tribunal Client Services Offices.

The overall working relationships have been extremely positive for the organizations and for the public as well. The Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal has benefited through the affiliation with a service network that understands how government is organized and how it operates. This has ensured that service levels and the provision of information to the public are consistent among all offices. Essentially, the successful integration of these operations benefits from the fact that the organizations are working towards a similar set of high level business goals: the achievement of providing the public with convenient access to government services and information.

At Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal/Government Information Centre Co-locations, landlords and tenants can file applications, and have their questions answered by a customer service representative. The co-locations are located in the following areas:

Barrie	Kingston
Kitchener	Owen Sound
Peterborough	St. Catharines
Thunder Bay	Whitby

At Government Information Centres, landlords and tenants can file applications and supporting documents. Staff of these centres cannot answer questions about the rights and obligations of tenants and landlords under the Tenant Protection Act; they can, however, accept applications on behalf of the Tribunal and provide access to information pamphlets and application forms.

The Tribunal uses the services of the following Government Information Centres:

Atikokan	Aurora	Bancroft	Barrie
Belleville	Blind River	Brampton	Brockville
Chapleau	Chatham	Cochrane	Cornwall
Dryden	Elliot Lake	Espanola	Fort Frances
Geraldton	Gore Bay	Guelph	Hawkesbury
Hearst	Huntsville	Ignace	Kapuskasing
Kenora	Kingston	Kirkland Lake	Kitchner
Lindsay	Marathon	Minden	Moosonee
New Liskeard	Nipigon	North Bay	Owen Sound
Parry Sound	Pembroke	Peterborough	Red Lake
Renfrew	Sarnia	Sault Ste. Marie	Simcoe
Sioux Lookout	St. Catharines	Stratford	Thunder Bay
Timmins	Whitby

Call Centre

The Tribunal has a virtual call centre for handling customer inquiries. There is a toll-free number for callers who live outside Toronto (1-888-332-3234); and, in the Greater Toronto area the number is 416-645-8080. Customer service representatives are available during normal business hours. An extensive telephone script answers frequently asked questions 24 hours a day, 7 days per week. This year, the Tribunal responded to approximately 700,000 telephone calls. After hours and on weekends, a toll-free number is also available for faxing time sensitive documents and for ordering any of the Tribunal's public education brochures. These brochures are available in English and French. Selected brochures on the most important topics are available in seven other languages: Portuguese, Italian, Chinese, Punjabi, Polish, Tamil and Spanish.

Members of the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal's Virtual Call Centre Team are the proud recipients of the Public Service Quality Fair 2002 Certificate of Excellence, gold level; Showcase Ontario Award of Excellence 2002; and the 2002 Amethyst award. In addition, Diana Macri, Director of Operations received recognition by the Premier and Secretary of Cabinet for significant contributions to OPS excellence and innovation.

As a result of the call centre transformation, the Tribunal was able to handle an increased volume of calls and helped issues get resolved fairly and quickly. Many provincial agencies, private sector companies and government agencies from other ministries now visit the call centre, which is considered a best practice. Recently, the OPS Ideas Campaign and the MAH Public Consultation Committee have called upon the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal call centre to fulfill their needs for a state-of-the-art and efficient call centre.

E-government

This year, the redesign of the Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal website made it easier and faster for clients to find information. The website has been modified to ensure that it meets the requirements of the Ontarians with Disabilities Act, 2001. Making our website more accessible is an important way to ensure the total accessibility of our information to all of our clients. The Tribunal will further enhance its high quality service for clients by introducing electronic filing capabilities. This innovation would give landlords and tenants another way to file applications under the Tenant Protection Act.

The Tribunal's website (www.orht.gov.on.ca) is visited almost one million times each month. Clients can find information about the progress of their application, the date of the hearing and whether an order has been issued. As well, all Tribunal forms are available on the website and through each regional and client service office.

Information Sharing

The Ontario Rental Housing Tribunal, on behalf of the Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing, hosted a three-day conference in October of rent regulators and tenant bureau representatives from across Canada. Held every five years, the conference focuses on the exchange of information on common experiences and problems, their resolutions, and how each province tackles difficulties they encounter. The conference included such topics as mediation, enforcement, balancing workload pressures and the whole realm of public education. Information and knowledge sharing is the basis of valuable learning and program advancement. Such conferences set the stage for constant dialogue with our provincial counterparts.

ORDER SUMMARIES

Tenant Application
Landlord Application

Sections 34 & 35
Section 69

The tenants applied for an order determining that the landlord had withheld a vital service and had failed to repair or maintain the rental unit. At the hearing location, just prior to the hearing, the landlord served the tenants with an application to terminate the tenancy because the tenants damaged the rental unit.

At the hearing, the landlord asked for, and was granted, permission to have both applications heard together. The tenants were given 20 minutes to prepare a response to the landlord's application. The initial order dismissed the tenants' application, found that the tenants caused the damage to the rental unit and required them to pay a substantial amount for the repair costs.

The tenants asked for a review of the order on the basis that they were denied natural justice because they were not asked whether they consented to the landlord's application being heard that day, nor were they asked to provide any submissions on the issue. The reviewing member agreed that there was a denial of natural justice, and a serious error in the initial order. Both applications were heard anew. The member dismissed the landlord's application on the basis that the landlord failed to prove the damage was caused by the tenant. The tenants received a modest abatement for some of the repair issues, but the member found that the tenants failed to prove other claims made in their application.

Landlord Application
Tenant Application

Section 69
Sections 34 & 35

The landlords applied to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenant because they required possession of the unit for their own use. The tenants applied on various grounds, including failure to comply with health, safety, housing or maintenance standards.

Shortly after the tenants moved in, they complained about the maintenance standards and water quality in the rental unit. A work order was issued that required a variety of repairs, and also that the water supply and quality be brought up to standard (water testing showed significant evidence of bacterial contamination). Soon after the work order was issued, the landlord served a notice of termination for personal use which was the basis of the application. Evidence was presented at the hearing that the landlords had been discussing how to “get rid” of the tenants before serving this notice of termination. After serving this notice, but before the landlords filed, the landlords’ house burned down. Fearing their application might not succeed, the landlords served a subsequent notice of termination, also based on personal use, that was the basis for application. In the meantime, the tenants had filed an application based on the water quality issues, among others.

The member determined that at the time the landlords served the first notice of termination, they did not have a genuine intention to occupy the rental unit. However, by the time they filed their application, their intention to occupy the unit was genuine (their house had by then burned down). The landlords submitted that the member should consider their intention at the time the application was filed, not their intention at the time the notice was served. The member disagreed, and dismissed the application on the basis that the notice of termination was given in bad faith.

The member determined that the landlords’ intention to occupy the rental unit was genuine at the time they served the second notice of termination. However, the member also considered whether the landlords’ application should be refused under section 84 because of a serious breach of the landlords’ obligations under the Act (the tenants had no potable water for several months). The member determined that subsection 84(2) requires the Tribunal to consider whether a serious breach exists at the time of the hearing and that although this breach had not been remedied at the time the landlords’ application was filed, it had been remedied by the time the hearing was held. As such, the member granted termination of tenancy, but delayed the eviction for a considerable period of time. The member also awarded an abatement of rent on the tenants’ application because of the problems with water quality.

Tenant Application

Subsection 7(2)

The tenants of a mobile home park applied to determine whether the sites they leased are covered by the Tenant Protection Act.

The park is located on Indian reserve lands. One of the main arguments put forth was that the landlord was in fact a corporation, and that a corporation operating on an Indian reserve should be considered exempt from the provisions of the Indian Act. The member considered whether the landlord was a corporation, or whether the landlords were four individuals. Each of the individuals had been issued Certificates of Possession for an undivided one-quarter interest in the land used for the park.

The member determined that although the four individuals referred to above had jointly registered a corporation, they had never transferred their interests in the land used for the park to the corporation. The corporation never held any interest in real property, including any interest in the Certificates of Possession for the mobile home park lands. The tenants did not make their rent payments to the corporation. The transfer of property rights to the corporation would have required a Band Council Resolution and a permit under the Indian Act, and this permission was never sought. The member considered the real substance of the activities related to the residential complex pursuant to section 188 of the Tenant Protection Act, and determined that the landlords were the four individuals and not the corporation.

Because the member found that the landlords were individuals, it was not necessary to consider the applicability of the Tenant Protection Act to a corporation operating on an Indian reserve. The member found that tenancy agreements for the mobile home park sites were between the landlords, who were Indian band members, and the tenants, who were not. The member determined that on the facts of this case, the Tenant Protection Act does not apply to the mobile home park leases in question.

Landlord Application

Section 81

The tenant of the rental unit had died, after which her daughter continued to occupy the rental unit. The daughter was not a tenant on the lease and the landlord filed the application to have her evicted as an unauthorized occupant.

The tenant's daughter submitted at the hearing that as the definition of tenant in section 1 of the Act includes heirs, she meets the definition of tenant and should be allowed to retain possession of the rental unit.

The member considered the definition of tenant in section 1 of the Act, which states that a tenant includes a person who pays rent in return for the right to occupy a rental unit and includes the tenant's heirs. The member also considered that the definition of heir in Black's Law Dictionary includes one who inherits property, whether real or personal. The member determined that a tenant's heir does not simply step into the shoes of the tenant with respect to the occupancy of the rental unit. The member also found that no arguments were presented that a tenancy could be considered real or personal property, in other words, something that could be inherited. The member found that "heir" was included in the definition of tenant so that the estate could perform such activities as recovering the rent deposit. The member found that the tenant's daughter could not be considered a tenant of the rental unit by virtue of being an heir to the deceased tenant, and ordered that the tenant's daughter be evicted.

Landlord Application

Section 69

The landlords filed an application to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenant because they required possession of the rental unit.

The person intending to move into the rental unit was the father of one of the landlords. He had recently separated and sold his home. The member was satisfied that the father in good faith intended to move into the rental unit. The tenant, however, argued that the adjudicator should apply section 84 in the circumstances, as termination of the tenancy would create a real hardship for her. The tenant had lived in the unit for 18 years and had a medical condition and a limited income that would make finding alternate accommodation very difficult. She submitted that her particular unit was chosen because she pays the lowest rent and because there are ill feelings between her and the landlords.

The member found that, having regard to all the circumstances of this application, including the extreme length of the tenant's occupation of the unit, and the availability of three other units in the complex, it was fair to refuse the application, and refused to terminate the tenancy pursuant to section 84 of the TPA.

Landlord Application

Section 69

The landlord applied to terminate the tenancy because the tenants caused damage to the rental unit and had substantially interfered with other tenants' reasonable enjoyment of the residential complex or substantially interfered with a lawful right, privilege or interest of the landlord or another tenant. The landlord gave this notice because the tenants had installed a satellite dish without permission.

In this situation, the satellite dish was safely installed on the tenants' rear patio and was mostly obscured from view by the surrounding fence. The wires that run from the dish to the receiver inside the rental unit were fed through a pipe that pre-existed the satellite installation.

The notice of termination was based on damage to the rental unit, but, the member found there was no evidence that the installation of the satellite dish damaged the unit in any way. The landlord submitted that the satellite dish contravened its rules and regulations; however, these rules deal with alterations and fixtures, and the member found that the dish was not a fixture. The landlord referred the member to other Tribunal decisions wherein members required tenants to remove satellite dishes, but the member found that those cases were distinguishable from the facts of this case as this tenant did not affix the dish to the building, or create a hole in the outside of the building to feed the wires through. The landlord further submitted that as the unit was located in a non-profit housing complex, it should be given special consideration in this matter. The member disagreed and found that the landlord was subject to the same provisions of the Tenant Protection Act as any other landlord and that it was not a function of the Tribunal to enforce the policy of this landlord. The landlord's application was dismissed.

Tenant Application

Section 144

The tenants applied for an order determining that the landlord had collected or retained money illegally. The tenants had paid the first month's rent and provided a last month's rent deposit and had been told by the landlord the unit would be cleaned and painted before they moved in. The tenants testified that when they went to move in, nothing had been done, and the unit was inhabitable.

The tenant signed an agreement to forfeit the first month's rent they had paid in exchange for the return of the last month's rent deposit. The tenants felt they had no choice but to sign the agreement, as they needed the money to rent another unit.

The member determined that the agreement signed by the parties was contrary to the Act and that, pursuant to subsection 2(1), the Act applies despite any agreement to the contrary. The member further determined that as the unit was uninhabitable, the landlord breached a material covenant pursuant to section 11 of the Act, which released the tenant from any obligation under the tenancy agreement. The member ordered the landlord to repay the tenants the first month's rent.

Landlord Application

Section 137

The landlord applied for an order to vary the percentage rent reduction set out in a Notice of Rent Reduction issued by the Municipality.

A landlord who makes this type of application is required by paragraph 3 of section 28.6 of O. Reg. 194/98 to file evidence of the rents charged for the residential complex. In this case, the landlord provided information about the rents charged for the residential complex by filling out the appropriate part of the application form. The member determined that this was not evidence of the rents charged pursuant to the regulation, and directed the landlord to provide the required evidence by a specific date. The landlord never responded to the direction, and the member dismissed the application.

Tenant Application

Section 144

The tenant applied to the Tribunal for an order determining that the landlord retained money illegally.

The tenant moved out of the rental unit on September 30 and acknowledged at the hearing that he had provided insufficient notice of termination. The tenant paid the rent for September, and the landlord retained the last month's rent deposit. A new tenant moved into the rental unit on October 1, and the foundation of the tenant's application was that as the unit was rented for October 1, the landlord had not suffered a loss, and should have returned the last month's rent deposit.

The landlord submitted that they may have suffered a loss, but provided no evidence to show this. The landlord argued that the onus was on the tenant to prove that the landlord had not suffered a loss. The member disagreed, stating that the evidence to show a loss could have easily been put forward by the landlord and inferred from the absence of any such evidence that the landlord did not suffer a loss. The member ordered the landlord to return the last month's rent deposit to the tenant.

Landlord Application

Section 138

The landlord applied for an order for an above guideline rent increase. The original application was dismissed because the expenditures were not incurred by the landlord, but by the co-ownership corporation in which the landlord owns shares. The landlord has exclusive control over two of the 53 units in the complex and those two units were the subjects of the application.

The landlord applied for a review of the decision to dismiss the application, which was granted. The reviewing member determined that section 138 of the Act does not require that a particular person incur the costs claimed, only that costs have been incurred respecting the complex. The member found that the evidence clearly showed that there was an extraordinary increase in utility costs during the relevant period and that capital expenditures were incurred respecting the complex. The member found that dismissing the application was a serious error, and cancelled the initial order. The member ordered a rent increase of 3% above the guideline.

Landlord Application

Section 69

The landlord applied to terminate the tenancy and evict the tenants because the tenants or someone they permitted in the residential complex interfered with other tenants' reasonable enjoyment of the complex. The tenants' son and his guests had been having frequent disruptive parties, which continued even after the application was filed.

At the hearing, the tenants admitted to one incident of partying at their rental unit, but took the position that they were not responsible for any incidents that occurred outside the rental unit. Based on evidence the landlord provided at the hearing, the found that persons the tenant permitted in the residential complex substantially interfered with other tenants' reasonable enjoyment of the complex.

The member decided it would be appropriate to consider section 84 even though the tenants had not raised the issue themselves. The member considered that the incidents had been fairly isolated, and that the tenants themselves had not been directly involved. The member also considered that the landlord had given the tenants opportunities to cure the problem before filing an application, and that the tenants had not done so. Finally, the member considered the tenants' cavalier attitude towards the rights of other tenants and their refusal to accept responsibility for the behaviour of their son and his guests in the residential complex. For these reasons, the member found that it would be unfair to refuse to grant an eviction order, but exercised his discretion to delay the eviction for a short period of time.
